I'm a graphic designer based just outside Manchester with over five years' experience working across brand, digital and print. I create clear, engaging design that feels genuine and well-considered — from campaigns and websites to full brand identities.

Alongside client work, I've collaborated with marketing teams at Burnley College and Oldham College, and set live briefs with a local university — helping students turn ideas into real-world design projects. Those experiences have built my interest in teaching and mentoring within design education.
